

Support and Foster Child Custody Act will undoubtedly aid the faster development of this form of support.

It should be mentioned that there are also opponents of the assistance program, who believe that this form of support is only a minor improvement to the dysfunctional social welfare system in Poland and that family assistants only hinder social workers in doing their duty according to the legal definition. However, the assistance program through its effects shows that it is a good idea to separate social work from granting financial help as well as to decrease the number of clients for one worker and it can become the basis of larger developmental changes in the social welfare system in Poland.
