

School as a place of optimising human opportunities – a sociopedagogical project

Abstract

Polish contemporary school, being subject to reform, now faces a difficult task of preparing students for their functioning in a dynamically changing reality. Apart from the tasks in the field of education and care, it also seems crucial to perform a pro-employment function. The introduced article takes the sociopedagogical stand, in which strong emphasis is put on social support for students (pro-social activity of the institution) and treating altruism as a crucial pedagogical task.

Key words: educational system, pro-employment activity of school, labour market, social support, altruism, local society
