However, in spite of the limitations, the advantage of this study is in the exposure of the relationship between teachers' pedagogical beliefs and their experience of burnout, which had not been previously researched. Our findings suggest that subsequent research into this area is certainly worth further attention.

References

